CSE 4500 – Platform Computing
Professor Lawrence Orijuela
Final Project
Due Midnight May 20th

Instructions:
1. Download this assignment as an editable word doc from Canvas.
2. Write your name and student ID.
3. Read the instructions to create a simple About Me page with HTML.
4. Export this doc with your name and screenshots as a PDF:
   a. Use this as your title: CSE4500_YourName_Final
   b. Example: CSE4500_BobSmith_Final
5. In the FinalProject Canvas submission page, please submit the following:
   a. This document as a PDF, filled out and with screenshots.
   b. A ZIP file of your FinalProject.

Name: Nathan Bush   Student ID #: 007643099   Points: /100

For your Final, you explore your creative side and make a fun and simple web page that shows your best qualities.

Accompanying Video (shows me doing this project): https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=5R9GCazBgf8

Final Project: About Me page

1. Create a folder called FinalProject-AboutMe and open it with Visual Studio Code.
2. Create three subfolders within called:
    a. CSS
    b. Media
    c. Scripts
3. Inside the CSS folder, add the following:
    a. styles.css file from canvas.
        i. Change the background color of the body object from blue (#78BDFA) to whatever color you would like.
            1. This site can help: https://www.rapidtables.com/convert/color/rgb-to-hex.html
    b. jquery.mobile-1.3.1.min.css from canvas.
4. Inside the Media folder, add the following:
    a. A picture(s) of you. (If you do not wish to use a picture of yourself, use a picture of your favorite Pokémon instead.)
    b. Go to YouTube and download the video that "lives in your head rent-free". (If you do not know what this means, I cannot help you.)
5. Inside the Scripts folder, add the following:
    a. chromeFileProtocolFix.js from canvas.
6. Create three html pages and within each of them, include a way to navigate between all three of them:
    a. Index.html
    b. favShortStory.html
    c. favVideo.html
7. For each of the three web pages:
    a. Index.html
        i. Put a Large Header that reads "About <your First and Last Name>"
        ii. Add your picture from media.
        iii. A brief paragraph about yourself. (At least three sentences.)
        iv. Add a table that shows your:
            1. Your favorite fruit
            2. Your favorite vegetable
            3. Your favorite Pokémon
            4. Fun fact about yourself
            5. Your favorite quote
    b. favShortStory.html
        i. Google your favorite short story, inspect the source, and copy paste the html code into your project.
    c. favVideo.html
        i. Add the video that lives in your head rent-free.
8. (Optional +3 points) Add one feature to this project that I did not ask of you already. If you added an extra feature, tell me what it is here:

_____
_____
_____

[Put Screenshots in this section.]

[About Me]

[Short Story]

127.0.0.1:5500/favShortSt...

- About Me
- Favorite Short Story
- Favorite Video

Nathan Bush's Favorite Short Story

"Other People" by Neil Gaiman

"Time is fluid here," said the demon. He knew it was a demon the moment he saw it. He knew it, just as he knew the place was Hell. There was nothing else that either of them could have been.

The room was long, and the demon waited by a smoking brazier at the far end. A multitude of objects hung on the rock-gray walls, of the kind that it would not have been wise or reassuring to inspect too closely. The ceiling was low, the floor oddly insubstantial.

"Come close," said the demon, and he did. The demon was rake-thin, and naked. It was deeply scarred, and it appeared to have been flayed at some time in the distant past. It had no ears, no sex. Its lips were thin and ascetic, and its eyes were a demon's eyes: they had seen too much and gone too far, and under their gaze he felt less important than a fly.

"What happens now?" he asked.

"Now," said the demon, in a voice that carried with it no sorrow, no relish, only a dreadful flat resignation, "you will be tortured."

"For how long?"

But the demon shook its head and made no reply. It walked slowly along the wall, eyeing first one of the devices that hung there, then another. At the far end of the wall, by the closed door, was a cat o' nine tails made of frayed wire. The demon took it down with one three-fingered hand and walked back, carrying it reverently. It placed the wire tines onto the brazier, and stared at them as they began to heat up.

"That's inhuman."

"Yes."

The tips of the cat's tails were glowing a dead orange.

As the demon raised his arm to deliver the first blow, it said, "In time you will remember even this moment with fondness."

"You are a liar."

"No," said the demon. "The next part," it explained, in the moment before it brought down the cat, "is worse." Then the tines of the cat landed on the man's back with a crack and a hiss, tearing through the expensive clothes, burning and rending and shredding as they struck and, not for the last time in the place, he screamed.

There were 211 implements on the walls of that room, and in time he was to experience

[Video]

- About Me
- Favorite Short Story
- Favorite Video

Nathan Bush's Favorite Video